

Benny, the night he was back home

After being missing for 8 months Benny was found safe. He was actually living as a feral cat at Haliburton Farm. His family is so happy he's home, and it was because of his ear tattoo. The tattoo allowed the people at the farm to see that he was loved and missed by someone, and called a vet clinic to get him reunited. It is estimated that only 10 percent of lost cats find their way back home, so increase the odds by having some sort of permanent identification on your cat, like a tattoo or microchip. All our love to Benny!
